

Peggi Einhorn is the chief financial officer and treasurer of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF), an $11 billion philanthropy that is dedicated to everyone in America having a fair and just opportunity for health and well-being. Since assuming this role in 2004, Peggi has been responsible for ensuring that RWJF fulfills its financial obligations as a private, tax-exempt foundation and remains a good steward of the private resources entrusted to it in the public's interest. More specifically, Peggi is in charge of a 30 person team that conducts a broad range of financial activities including accounting, financial reporting, resource allocation and internal controls as well as on-going planning for the Foundation's $500 million annual payout obligation. Peggi's team also provides financial support to the Foundation's program areas, which involves review of grant budgets and due diligence for grants and impact investments. Peggi serves as the executive liaison to the Finance Committee of the RWJF Board of Trustees and presents to the Committee and full Board at each quarterly Board of Trustees meeting.

Before joining the Foundation, Peggi was a senior vice president of J.P. Morgan Chase in New York City. Peggi began her Chase career in the Bank's year-long management training program and then as loan officer working with clients in the finance and transportation sectors. During her 24 years at the Bank, Peggi held 16 different positions, many of which were strategic planning positions for business units in both the corporate and retail banks. Before and after the historic merger of the Chase Manhattan and Chemical Corporations, Peggi was the associate director of investor and rating agency relations working with the Bank's institutional investors and security and rating agency analysts. Peggi's last 10 years at the Bank also coincided with Chase's second major bank merger with JP Morgan. Peggi continued to assume positions of increased and diverse responsibility. Among other positions during this period, Peggi served as the Secretary to the Asset and Liability Committee of the Bank; became the staff executive to the Corporation's Chief Financial Officer; was the CFO of LabMorgan, the business unit responsible for the bank's e-commerce activities; and headed up an operations group responsible for business unit reporting and customer profitability.

Peggi has long been active in civic affairs. Peggi was selected as a 1999 recipient of a David Rockefeller Fellowship from the New York City Partnership, allowing her to join with 12 other senior corporate executives in a year-long program to examine key issues in the private, public, and not-for-profit sectors of New York City. Peggi is also the former Chairwoman of the Board of the Brooklyn Children's Museum and remains an active trustee. During her three decades on the Board, Peggi has served as head of the finance committee and strategic planning committees, participated in several CEO search committees and guided the museum through financial cycles and a $65 million award winning physical expansion.

Peggi received an MBA from Columbia University's Graduate School of Business and a BA degree from William Smith College. Peggi resides in Carroll Gardens, Brooklyn with her husband and has two adult children. In her spare time, she enjoys travelling and exploring other cultures, biking, swimming and life drawing.
