

Sree Sreenivasan is the inaugural Marshall Loeb Visiting Professor of Digital Innovation at Stony Brook University School of Journalism.

He is also a leading social/digital consultant, speaker and trainer for nonprofits, corporations, startups and executives. His recent clients include Hong Kong's West Kowloon Cultural District; UNHCR, the UN refugee agency; the Pulitzer Prizes; Louvre Abu Dhabi; TheWrap entertainment news; U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum; American Museum of Natural History; National Ballet of Canada; various private companies and startups; and Global Teacher Prize, which gives one K-12 teacher in the world $1m.

He has been Chief Digital Officer of major institutions in multiple industries: City of New York (working at City Hall); Columbia University; and the Metropolitan Museum of Art (leading a 70-person team that helped keep the 150-year-old institution relevant in the smartphone age). Before joining the Met, he spent 20 years as a full-time professor at Columbia Journalism School.

He was named one of Fast Company's 100 Most Creative People in Business in 2015; the world's most influential Chief Digital Officer by CDO Club in 2016; and one of Poynter's 35 most influential people in social media in 2010. He is a contributor to CNBC's "Squawk Alley," appearing monthly to talk tech.

He is cofounder of two journalism organizations: Online Journalists Assn (celebrating its 20th anniversary in Sept 2019; he was founding administrator of its prize program, the world's largest journalism awards program) and SAJA, the South Asian Journalists Assn, a group of 1,000+ journalists in the US and Canada (celebrating its 25th anniversary in Oct. 2019).